

SURF's Alliance for Action Programme

A brief overview

Since 2013, SURF has been enhancing cross sector understanding and cooperation in place-based regeneration via its Alliance for Action initiative.

Working in five community focused collaborations, it provides practical support on agreed priorities and draws out shared learning outcomes, of interest to regeneration practitioners and policy-makers across Scotland.

SURF's experienced, connected and constructive role enables local community groups, public agencies and other stakeholders to work more effectively together by connecting physical, social and economic regeneration challenges and assets.

SURF's unique collaborative work with communities and national partners achieves a rich understanding of how current policies and resources are interacting in real places; and how they might be improved for better, more sustainable outcomes.

The overarching purpose of SURF's Alliance for Action programme is:

- to strengthen community resilience and promote practical regeneration outcomes in a diverse set of case study communities;
- to enhance wider policy and resource considerations for supporting community regeneration in the continuing challenging context.

Improving Outcomes

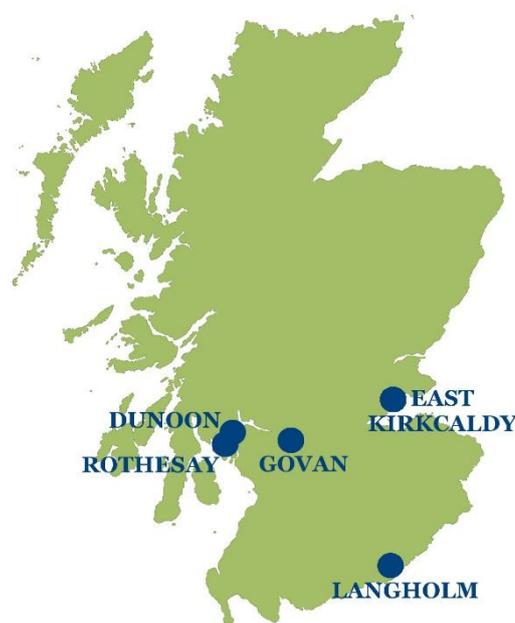

Positive outcomes for the different partners involved in SURF's Alliance for Action collaborations include the following:

- Local residents – improved quality of life and opportunities via better engagement with local services and assets and the opportunity to influence national and local policies.
- Local authorities – increased access to, and engagement with, community-based knowledge, assets and initiatives and an enhanced national profile.
- Local enterprises – improved business and engagement opportunities in a clarified system of collaborative priorities.

- Local community and voluntary organisations – improved cooperation and enhanced mutually beneficial collaboration with the relevant national and local authority Community Planning processes and priorities.
- Local and national regeneration policy officers – increased knowledge of the practical interaction of different policy and resource impacts in different settings.
- Cross-sector local stakeholders – better shared understanding and active coordination of respective roles, capacities, priorities, skills and resources.
- Regional and national regeneration agencies – more effective and efficient targeting and coordination of policy and resources
- Academics – more effective engagement of research with improved practice based learning opportunities and productive initiatives.

Programme Sites

SURF's programme currently operates in a set of five discrete communities, all of which face significant regeneration challenges. They vary from post-industrial urban areas to coastal, rural and island towns (see map, right). This variety helps SURF to better understand how relevant policies and resources are operating in different place contexts.

Cross Site Initiatives

SURF delivers a number of interactive initiatives based on the five Alliance for Action sites. These include; Shared Learning Events, which bring local stakeholders and national partners together to explore topics of mutual interest, such as heritage, participation and wellbeing; a People and Sector Connector Service, which provides a nationwide learning and networking programme for regeneration officers in local government; and Thematic Agency Collaborations, which links related sets of national agencies directly with each other, and with regeneration assets and aspirations in the local sites.

Future Development Plans

Over the current 2018-21 period, SURF and its partners have agreed that the programme will operate with five or six participating places.

SURF is currently conducting a review of existing sites, exploring development options towards further progress in some sites and potential exit strategies in others, where appropriate. SURF is also considering options for potential new sites, to maintain a complementary suite of comparative regeneration contexts across the programme.
